Executive Summary

The Beltrami community has identified youth and senior programming as a top priority for improving their neighborhood. This research was conducted in order to discover what programs exist in surrounding neighborhoods from which Beltrami youth and seniors could benefit. In addition, research was conducted in an effort to determine what the needs and desires of the youth and seniors in Beltrami through the use of surveys and task forces. Informal research revealed additional information about programming from youth and seniors. The information gathered from these steps revealed the need for more services for seniors and more activities for youth. All of the data collected in each phase of the project aided researchers in making final recommendations.

Introduction

Background Information

The Beltrami Neighborhood Revitalization Program Steering Committee formed in the early 1990's, after the formation of the citywide Neighborhood Revitalization Program (NRP). The NRP allocates funds from the Community Development Block Grant, a federal program to help revitalize urban areas. The Beltrami NRP Steering Committee is the group in charge of planning and implementing NRP activities in the Beltrami neighborhood of northeast Minneapolis. This committee, although separate from the Beltrami Neighborhood Council, works in conjunction with them on neighborhood related issues.

This committee has already allocated over $350,000 in their "First Step Plan" to help improve the neighborhood by focusing on housing and park renovations. In order to receive additional funding, each neighborhood must prepare a Neighborhood Action Plan that lists objectives, strategies and goals. In community meetings while preparing for the Neighborhood Action Plan, youth and senior activities were cited as being insufficient and therefore a concern for the Beltrami area.

Identification of Phases

The neighborhood project coordinator, in conjunction with the NRP Steering Committee, designed the implementation process and phases of the research project. The project consisted of three phases. The execution of Phase I entailed an in-depth research of existing services and activities available to youth and senior citizens in northeast Minneapolis. Researchers clarified that the target group for youth was ages 12-19 and seniors age 60 and above. Researchers used resources to find and identify current activities in surrounding neighborhoods and greater Minneapolis. Phase II required the conduction of a neighborhood wide survey to gain insight into uses and the desires of residents. This feedback would be used in task force discussions. Phase III consisted of defining three task forces. Task forces were planned to consist of youth, seniors and other interested adults.

Community Dynamics

Historically, community involvement within Beltrami has been inadequate regarding neighborhood issues. The neighborhood has traditionally been more reactive rather than proactive. Attempts to build neighborhood capacity through community wide events has had minimal success. This lack of initiative has been voiced by several members of the community and is reflected in low response rates to surveys and in event and committee participation. The hope was that this project would ignite renewed interest in strengthening community bonds because the residents had expressed concern regarding the lack of youth and senior services and activities. The importance of this dynamic was revealed in every phase of the research project.

Phase I: Identification of Available Resources

Methodology

Phase I commenced by analyzing the initial list of resources given to researchers by the neighborhood project coordinator. These resources provided a stepping stone for researchers, however, more services and activities needed to be identified. Researchers then used the Minneapolis Yellow Pages, the internet and the United Way First Call for Help Directory. Following identification of potential service and activity organizations, researchers made initial contact with the organization. After speaking with the organization and ascertaining their relevance to Beltrami youth and senior citizens, literature was gathered and reviewed. If the organization or agency services were determined to be pertinent to the needs of Beltrami, it was included into a directory created by researchers.

Results

A directory was created as a reference for neighborhood residents that included services and activities in neighborhoods surrounding Beltrami (see Appendix A). The directory may be distributed by the Beltrami NRP Steering Committee to residents as a reference guide. The purpose of this guide is to link Beltrami senior citizens and youth to activities of interest.

Community Meeting

The directory was presented to the neighborhood at a community meeting with attendance approximating 10 to 15 residents. Researchers at this point, asked for suggestions on resources to be added to the directory. After discussion, researchers revealed the remaining steps in the research process. Since, this was the first community meeting regarding this project, several questions were raised. One of the more significant questions posed concerned the definition of youth used by researchers. As mentioned before, youth were defined as ages 12-19 by the project coordinator. Some neighborhood members objected to this definition as they believed youth should be defined as 8-18. The reasoning behind this objection is that they felt that programming should be targeted for "at-risk" children starting at age 8. Others in the community believed that youth under the age of 12 should have been targeted by the study due to the length of implementation. Children under age 12 now, will be within the defined parameters of the study when programming is actually implemented. Thus, youth who are 15-19 now, will no longer be in the community when programming actually begins. Therefore, it was thought that youth under age 12 should be consulted now for activities that they will want when they are older because they will be the benefiting from the recommendations of the research.

Researchers explained that youth under the age of 12 may not know what they will want when they are older. Therefore, it seems logical to ask the youth who are currently 12-19 what activities they prefer. Researchers also expressed that 12-19 year olds were targeted for this study because there is currently a deficiency in activities accessible to these youth.

The community meeting concluded with the decision that researchers would continue to use the initial 12-19 year old definition of youth. All agreed that the study would continue as originally planned.

Phase II: Neighborhood Survey

Methodology

A survey was produced by researchers that was designed to gather input from youth and seniors as defined above (see Appendix B). A rough draft of the survey was submitted to the Minnesota Center for Survey Research at the University of Minnesota for recommendations regarding clarity. After the survey was approved it was distributed to every dwelling unit in Beltrami via mail. Included with the survey was a cover letter explaining details, its purpose and importance, and directions for completing and returning the survey, with postage paid.

Survey response rate from the neighborhood was poor. This response was representative of the rate from previous surveys. The preceding survey done by the project coordinator and the Steering Committee had promised residents there would be no further surveys, therefore, the response rate to that survey was 10%. However, traditionally, the response rate has been 4% or lower. Perhaps this survey's response was in line with other surveys distributed in the community, or the low response rate could be credited to promises made earlier. Researchers feel that a response rate of 22 out of 453 (4.8%) is not representative of the neighborhood. Therefore, survey results are not considered a reliable source of information.

Results

Of the initial 22 responses, 15 surveys were considered useable. Useable was defined as answering more than the demographic information questions at the top of the survey. Of the 15 viable surveys, 11 were returned by seniors, 3 by persons age 20-59, and 1 was returned by a targeted youth.

Survey results from persons age 20-59 had no suggestions for youth or senior activities, as they felt that there was not a need for more activities in Beltrami. The one response from the targeted youth was very non-specific, although they did express the need for more youth and senior programs. If offered, the youth respondent indicated that they would be interested in participating in athletics, social events, tutoring and movies. They currently use the basketball courts and walking paths in the park, on average, five days per month.

Of the viable surveys returned by seniors, 4 indicated that there was a need for more senior programs in Beltrami, while 7 believed that there was not a need for more senior activities. These seven senior respondents also indicated that they currently do not use the park, or participate in any activities in the Beltrami neighborhood. The four seniors who expressed the need for more senior programming suggested coffee clubs, luncheons, bookclubs, writing and speaking classes, computer courses, and any other community education for seniors.

Phase III: Neighborhood Task Forces

Methodology

Interest for task force involvement was supposed to be generated and initiated from survey responses. However, only one survey indicated interest in participating. Therefore, researchers advertised in the Beltrami Bulletin, the Northeaster and through posted flyers around the community. All of these methods failed to generate enthusiasm and support for task forces. The task forces were divided into; a youth task force, consisting of youth members, a senior citizen member task force, and an adult task force. Youth members were to address youth issues, seniors were to address senior citizen concerns, and the adult task forces was to discuss both youth and senior activities.

Due to lack of interest and participation by the community, researchers began informally recruiting individuals for the task forces. A list of active senior residents was given to the researchers by the project coordinator. The individuals on the list were contacted and asked to participate in the senior task force. Of the eighteen seniors contacted, only two expressed interest in meeting. It was agreed that these two individuals, and the researchers would meet for an initial meeting on a Friday afternoon. At this meeting the seniors expressed to researchers that they felt there was no need for future task force meetings because they had no more suggestions.

In an attempt to generate interest in the youth task force researchers contacted a youth services coordinator that works out of the Beltrami Park. The youth services coordinator said they would post flyers in the park building and would inform youth who frequent the park about the upcoming task force meetings. In addition, researchers contacted the co-chairs of the Steering Committee to encourage them to bring their children and other parents and youth in the area to participate. It was hoped these efforts would result in active participation in the task forces. Unfortunately, active participation by youth or adults, was not achieved.

Results

Youth task force involvement consisted of five youth who were just finishing with a cooking class that were coerced by the youth services coordinator into participating. These youth created a "wish list" of activities, items and programs that they would at the park. This list consisted of; a bookclub, organized athletic events, movie nights, more games, more time on the computers, a study room, and social events. They also expressed an interest in using the Armory's facilities such as the basketball courts, the kitchen, the game room and the computer room. While the youth task force was meeting with a researcher, the other researcher was meeting with the one resident who came to the adult task force.

The senior citizens task force revealed a need for more service related programs, instead of activities. They expressed the need for more and better transportation services for seniors in the community. In addition, they also desired help with house cleaning and yard work such as lawn maintenance and snow shoveling. They did indicate an interest in having some social events for seniors such as bingo, a book or movie club, and card night at the park or a residents personal home. Lastly, they proposed a neighborhood volunteer garden to work in and sit by the monument marker in the park.

Due to the poor attendance at task force meetings, researchers decided to conduct the rest of Phase III informally. Again, the researchers contacted the list of seniors given to them by the project coordinator. In conducting these phone interviews regarding the needs and interests of seniors in Beltrami, it became evident that many seniors did not have time for activities, or they would not participate if they were offered. "I am just too old for that stuff," was a common response.

In a final effort to obtain the input of the targeted youth, researchers "hung-out" at the park for extended periods of time. During this time the youth expressed their disappointment with the park. Many felt that much attention was given to the younger kids but that there was not a lot for them. Several youth indicated that the park lacked many of the amenities of other area parks. They suggested that the park fix or replace existing games such as air hockey, foosball, and ping pong tables. They added that once these games are up and running, it is important to have the supplies such as balls and paddles that are necessary to play the games. Previously, the games were in working order but there were no balls or paddles available.

Youth also expressed the desire for an additional or bigger basketball courts. It was also suggested that the park turn on the lights at night so the youth can play basketball or football in the green space of the park in the evenings. Currently, they are playing these games in the street because it is the only lighted area. The proposed use of the Armory facility for recreational activities would also help to alleviate this problem. Another proposal was to have a summer employment or job share program. Youth were not very specific with the details of this program but stated that they would like to be made aware of part-time summer work. Lastly, they suggested that a couch be put in the community room for a place to talk and "hang-out" and that a radio be provided in the community room.

Recommendations

Researchers acknowledge that the results are extremely limited and not representative of the community as a whole. However, some of the suggestions made by youth and seniors, in the opinion of the researchers, are feasible. Suggestions such as a new basketball court are workable due to the fact that the tennis courts are greatly under-used according to youth, and members of the Beltrami Neighborhood Council. The tennis courts provide an opportune site for a new basketball court as the ground has already been leveled. In addition, the recommendation to turn the park lights on at night has been made by the youth but also by adults in the neighborhood as a crime prevention strategy. These lights were put in a few years ago for crime prevention but have not been consistently used. The proposal to have the existing indoor recreation equipment fixed or replaced and a supply of balls, paddles and other recreation accessories is attainable.

However, this would call for a collaborative effort between the Minneapolis Park and Recreation Board and the Beltrami Neighborhood in order to determine the roles each will play in the renovation, maintenance and supplies of the equipment.

The senior populations' greatest concern appeared to be transportation issues. In our research several organizations were identified that take seniors to and from appointments, shopping, and other visits. However, the problem is that many seniors do not know of these services, or do not have the money to pay for them. Therefore, it is possible to use these existing transportation services but have a certain fund established for this purpose.

When taking into consideration seniors wants and needs, every one of the aforementioned concerns requires organization in order to be feasible. Therefore, it is suggested that a senior citizens advisory committee be created to address these concerns. As previously mentioned, the researchers had a difficult time getting people involved. However, the task of the senior advisory committee is to create the necessary organization in order to obtain the services and activities discussed earlier. It is believed, that the senior citizens will have a greater sense of control and ownership over the advisory committee and thus there will be greater participation.

In order for both the youth and seniors suggestions to be realized, it is important for Beltrami Park, the neighborhood's main amenity, to be open during scheduled building hours. In the past, this occurrence has been identified by youth and seniors as a problem and frustration. Furthermore, the obstacle of accessibility created problems for researchers when trying to schedule task force meetings at the park. Moreover, the aforementioned suggestions may require the building hours to be extended.

Future Research Recommendations

Before further research or implementation is done in this neighborhood, it is essential that structure and communication be established in the neighborhood. Researchers believe that this must start at the Steering Committee level. The Steering Committee needs to have a more defined role in the community. Moreover, each Steering Committee member must be active their designated region. Active may mean going door to door to every dwelling unit in their region and introducing themselves as their Steering Committee representative. At this time the representative may also choose to get the names, phone numbers and addresses of all residents in their region. In addition, active may also mean recruitment of residents to attend meeting, via door knocking and phone calls.

Lastly, in an effort to increase neighborhood participation and awareness, it is suggested that the "Beltrami Bulletin" be increased in scope and published regularly. In addition, researchers also suggest that each region of the neighborhood be highlighted in the "Beltrami Bulletin" and in that same month, the representative of that region would have a neighborhood gathering. It is hoped by researchers, that these suggestions will increase the participation and communication within Beltrami.

Appendix 2

October 23, 1998

Dear Beltrami neighborhood resident,

Previous survey results expressed the potential need for more youth and senior citizens' programs in the Beltrami neighborhood. Therefore, we are now conducting a survey of the neighborhood to gain insight into what types of programs/activities neighborhood residents desire.

In order for the results to truly represent the needs and desires of the community, it is important that each questionnaire be completed and returned. It is also important that we receive a majority of the feedback from youth and senior citizens in the neighborhood, as these programs will be for them. Thus, we would like the survey to be completed by teenagers ages 12-19 and/or senior citizens age 60 and up. If there are extra surveys for your household, anyone not in those age groups can feel free to complete a questionnaire. If there are more than two members of your household that are between the ages of 12-19 and/or 60 years of age and up, there are extra copies of the survey available at the Beltrami park office.

You may be assured of confidentiality. The questionnaire has an identification number for mailing purposes only. This is so we may check your household off the mailing list when your questionnaire is returned. Your name will never be placed on the questionnaire.

The results of this research will be made available to the community when our study is completed in mid December.

I would be most happy to answer any questions you might have. Please write or call. The telephone number is 627-9967.

Thank you for your assistance.

Sincerely,

Becky Wolfgram (Graduate Researcher)

Joy Parizek (Undergraduate Researcher)

*Note: To return your survey please flip over the sheet of paper that has your mailing address on it. You will notice on the back side that return postage and addressing have been done for you. All you need to do is fold the survey in half and staple or tape it shut, and you are ready to mail it. Thanks for your cooperation.

Please answer the following questions as honestly and thoroughly as possible. All responses will be considered when formulating the youth and senior citizen program recommendations for the Neighborhood Action Plan. Your participation in this survey is required in order to ensure accurate needs assessment for Beltrami youth and seniors programming. Please make sure you complete the front and back sides of each piece of paper. We thank you in advance for your time and participation!
